HINDSIGHT CONSULTING GROUP

Implicit Bias and Microaggressions: How unchecked realities threaten the helping relationship

Presentation by Laura Hinds MSW, LCSW

SOME REQUESTS

Discussing our "blind-spots", our implicit biases, and privilege can be a very painful.

As we support each other in this important exploration, I would ask that we offer each other the following:

- An assumption of good intent (we are the choir!!)
- · Respect for differences in our comfort level and learning
- · Positive support and responses to all questions
- Thoughtful consideration of our wording and language

LEARNING OBJECTIVES

- To define and provide examples of Implicit Bias in our personal experiences and within the context of helping returning citizens
- · To empower us to mitigate the impact of our own biases while striving to avoid microaggressing in our work with vulnerable populations.
- · To highlight the impact of microaggressions and the steps to move past them toward repaired and strengthened relationships.

HOW FAR DOES IT REACH?

- · Unfortunately, Implicit Bias exists wherever human nature is at playeverywhere.
- Consequently, it affects us all, in every setting.
- The most dangerous aspect is when it is used to limit the rights/freedoms of others.
 - (Kang, Bennett, Carbado, & Casey, 2011)

HOW DOES IT RELATE WITH THE MENTOR PROGRAM?

- · Results in poor engagement with your mentee.
- Results in missed opportunities to advocate against discriminative and oppressive practices
- · Increases the likelihood of Microaggressions against our mentees and other colleagues and friends
- Damages relationships and efforts at social justice.

embersial consistency (4.5.2)

MICROAGGRESSIONS

- What is it?
 - · A collection of social snubs, statements, actions that occur in daily life and common interaction with individuals of minority status. Often these instances are considered "mild", "minor", and appear innocuous, but are experienced as chronic, unrelenting, and emotionally dangerous
 - · Generally they include:
 - Being surprised by someone's achievement
 - Reducing someone to a racial trail
 Assuming a stereotype is accurate

 - Demanding someone justify/explain themselves in a way you would not be expected to due to your majority status

PRIVILEGE

Privilege is the collection of invisible social traits and status that insulate us from negative outcomes in our professional, social, and emotional life.

- Often it is "invisible" to us
- It is not something we can easily control
- Acknowledgment can be painful
- · It is especially hard to address

WHAT COUNTS AS PRIVILEGE?

Things you may never have consideredas it is hard to know what you don't know you don't know.

Examples: Not considering that others have different experiences than you might

Not having to consider that your race may be a factor to your level of attractiveness

| CLOSING CONSIDERATIONS | |
| Remember, our returning citizens are vulnerable (despite the crime/demeanor) | |
| You hold more power than you think You may be perceived as "threatening" | |
| You are telling them what to do, and critiquing how well they do it | |
| You may be deciding what is "important"- which disempowers their will/desire | |
| You might be perceived as "part of an unjust system" Your recognition of privilege, microaggressions | |
| Your recognition of privilege, microaggressions and the experience of your mentees and JLWOPs can make a significant impact on the success of your participants!! | |
